6 doctoral positions (research associates)

The Freiburg Institute for Basic Income Studies (FRIBIS) is offering a total of six positions as research associates. The positions are available on a temporary contract for an initial period of 3 years, at 75% on the TV-L 13 salary scale. FRIBIS is an interdisciplinary institute that aims to combine scientific research with political and civil debates as well as political consultation relating to the Universal Basic Income. FRIBIS supports a worldwide network of scientists, political decision-makers and societal actors who have the joint goal of providing answers to the global challenges of our time by means of a Universal Basic Income. Accordingly, all members of the Junior Scientific Group are expected to work through interdisciplinary cooperation.

We are specifically looking for applicants from the following disciplines:

- Education
- Social Anthropology
- Computer Science
- Psychology
- Theology, especially Caritas Science and the Economics of Carework
- Economics

We also encourage the application of people from related disciplines.

Your Tasks

- Involvement in the development of research projects, scientific publications and presentations on national and international conferences.
- Assistance with organisational tasks and scientific management.

Your Application

A master's degree (or equivalent qualification) in a relevant field must be issued by the date of employment at the latest. Please send an exposé with your research project regarding the Universal Basic Income with your application documents by 28.02.2012 as an email to application@fribis.uni-freiburg.de.

For further information, contact Gudrun Kaufmann (gudrun.kaufmann@fribis.uni-freiburg.de).

More information on FRIBIS: www.fribis.uni-freiburg.de